Dear California Energy Commission:

I am writing to support the "Assessment of Avian Mortality from Collisions and Electrocutions," CEC-700-2005-015, by Melinda Dorin. I am appalled that some people in the wind industry are trying to suppress portions of it that they find inconvenient. If they don't like the report, let them write their own challenging it.

I support wind energy, but the only way to properly develop it is put it in the locations where it will do the least harm. We can't do that without data being published by neutral organizations like the California Energy Commission.

It is time for irresponsible elements in the wind industry to stop using global warming as an excuse to build projects that kill our wildlife in unacceptable numbers. If they want to be considered "green," they need to act that way. Otherwise, the public will regard them as charlatans.

I hope the California Energy Commission has the strength to keep the report as it is and implement its recommendations. I strongly encourage you to do so. If our state's birds and bats could speak, I'm sure they would too.

Sincerely yours,

Kelly Fuller
